

Seductive waterways, mesmerizing beauty and magical moments await on the Cajun Coast—one of America's most beautiful and mysterious natural areas. A gateway to the Atchafalaya Swamp Basin, the largest overflow swamp in the United States, and nestled between New Orleans and Lafayette, the Cajun Coast is surrounded by the rich, productive waters of Louisiana. Brimming with wildlife, visitors can experience nature at its finest through swamp tours, birdwatching, paddling or fishing.

The region's vibrant culture is a fascinating blend of Chitimacha Native American, French, Spanish, African, and Cajun heritage—a flavorful gumbo of music, food and history celebrated year-round through fairs and festivals. Travelers can explore charming small towns along the Bayou Teche National Scenic Byway and discover unique museums that tell the stories of this captivating region. Tempt your taste buds along the Shrimply Delicious Food Trail and relax to the soothing, unique soundscape of the bayous. The Cajun Coast is a mystically beautiful destination like no other.

Learn more at CajunCoast.com.

Contact:

Carrie Stansbury,
Executive Director

Cajun Coast
(985) 498-1374
cstansbury@cajuncoast.com

/CajunCoast @cajuncoast
#CajunCoast #MyCajunCoast #MysticallyBeautiful

Learn more at
ExploreLouisiana.com/Rose-Parade